

HEALING COLLECTIVE TRAUMAS RE-CONCILIATION & GOODWILL DIALOGUES

DIALOGUES & MEDITATION & SYSTEMS CONSTELLATIONS

JUNE 5~15. 2017, BUDAPEST

“Anngwyn St. Just is one of the truly original and innovative thinkers in the field of traumatology and human relationships.” (Peter Levine, PhD

While we often speak of trauma in the individual nervous system, or even in the family system, less attention is paid to what might be called the greater forces which shape individual lives, families, organizations and other large systems. Our integrative healing work will explore an ongoing, resonant and co-creative relationship between somatically oriented trauma methods and systemic constellation work and restorative dialogues and goodwill meditations.

Annawyn St. Just is a systemically oriented social traumatologist who holds advanced degrees from The Western Institute for Social Research and the University of California in Berkeley. She is also a cultural historian, psychotherapist and somatic educator who specializes in developing multimodal cross cultural methods based upon easily transmitted concepts for trauma education and recovery. Currently the director of The Arizona Center for Social Trauma and ACST International, she has also served as advisor to the Drug and Alcohol Studies Program at the University of California at Berkeley. Annawyn St. Just has travelled widely in North and South America, Europe and Russia teaching innovative ways of healing individual and social trauma.

Agota E. Ruzsa, founder of this project, is a systemic facilitator, coach & organizational healer working with mindful dialogues, AoH and systemic constellation. Her HEART project of Duna dialogues is a healing journey in a collective and collaborative space. Hosting Empathic & Affective Spaces for Transformation. This approach is an integration of constellation, bohmean dialogues, mindful presence, co-presencing and catharsis based inner work enhanced by systemic awareness, historic interconnections and perspectives held in sites wounded by collective traumas.

Emese Móricz, coach & organizational healer who acts as project manager and co-host providing coordination of the diverse program and also keeps registration and information in place.
