HEALING HISTORIC SOCIAL TRAUMA

A 2-day workshop

We all know how hurtful, disruptive events in our childhood can have a lasting negative impact on our lives, especially if there is lack of strong parenting. Less appreciated is the effect that historic social trauma can have down the generations. Wars, economic crashes, colonialism, empire, natural disasters, invasions, revolutions, all resonate down time, affecting the offspring of those immediately involved. And, if we are not careful, harming the lives of several generations. And this can happen whether our ancestors were so-called "perpetrators" or "victims".

This workshop is for you if:

- you suspect such a historic trauma in your family is affecting your present life and relationships,
- you are interested in the social impacts of historic trauma or
- you work with people impacted by past trauma.

Dr Anngwyn St Just is a leading international theorist and healer of the effects of social trauma on individuals. In this workshop, she will set out some guiding principles and then work with individual participants using Bert Hellinger's systemic constellations approach to offer profound healing for them and illustrating the process for all others.
